The document into which Dru's comments are being incorporated will be posted on the Willamette Partnership's website after the meeting, as part of their commitment to have a transparent process for this project. It's not a binding document – just a draft set of recommended practices for establishing water quality trading in our region and that we would support – but that could still be enough to justify caution here. I will ask to see their edits before they put it on the web and give you guys another chance to make sure it's how we want it phrased.

Subject: RE: Draft Best Practices, Follow-up from Workshop #1, Review by 5/22

Carrie,

Here are my brief comments on the last two documents I had to review – the April meeting summary and the Draft Guiding Principles. I have only one comment on each. For the meeting notes, I want a little more explanation of what we were looking for in “more robust” NRCS standards, to avoid misinterpretation as a criticism of NRCS standards. In the Guiding Principles document, I suggest a word to be added to make a sentence in the last paragraph on the first page read properly.

Subject: Draft Best Practices, Follow-up from Workshop #1, Review by 5/22

Good morning!

Attached are documents representing the follow-up from Workshop #1. Please review and send us your feedback by Wednesday, 5/22. All documents are posted on the project website.

Here's what we have:

- Final Meeting Summary - incorporating feedback from the version distributed on 4/19
- Revised draft of the JRA 2-pager with tracked changes
- Revised draft of the Guiding Principles with tracked changes
- Draft Best Practices from Workshop #1 - these represent our best attempt to synthesize points of consensus we heard on the Workshop #1 topics during and since the workshop. The intention is that we continue to revise this document until all are satisfied and we can consider upgrading them to Pilot Best Practices come November.

As usual, I have included only the core project team on this email so that you may distribute within your agency as most appropriate. Please follow up with questions, and enjoy your weekend.

Finally - for those participating in the BMP call next week - please look for an agenda and brief materials from me by this afternoon.

Best,
Carrie
